City Council

I am a smoker

How will the smokefree laws affect me?

From 6am on Sunday 1 July 2007 a new law comes into force that will require many places where people work or visit to be smokefree. The law will also apply to public transport and to some work vehicles.

What sort of places and vehicles will have to be smoke-free?

Examples of places that will have to be smokefree include – offices, factories, shops, hospitals, restaurants, pubs, bars and cinemas. Buses, coaches, taxis, mini-cabs and trains will at all times also have to be smokefree.

How will people know if they can't smoke somewhere?

The law will require that no-smoking signs have to be shown at entrances to smoke-free places and also in any vehicle that has to be smoke-free.

What could happen if someone smokes where they shouldn't?

Authorised officers of the council will enforce the smokefree law. They will be able to give someone an on the spot fine of £50 for smoking in a place or vehicle that has to be smoke-free. But if the matter goes to court, the fine could be up to £200.

Where will people be allowed to smoke?

People can generally smoke anywhere that does not by law have to be smokefree. For example people will not be breaking the law when they smoke out in the open air.

The law will also not stop people from smoking inside a private dwelling, but stairwells, lifts and corridors in blocks of flats or apartments will have to be smoke-free.

Hotels and guest houses can designate some of their bedrooms to be 'smoking allowed rooms' for the use of the guest, for the duration of their stay. But it will be against the law for someone to smoke in a bedroom that has not been designated.

What happens if people use their own home as a workplace?

The Government has no intention to make private dwellings and private residential spaces smokefree, but the law will apply to parts of dwellings used solely as a place of work by more than one person. Organisations may ask that visiting employees providing a service in someones home, are afforded smoke-free conditions whilst they are working there.
