Resident feedback

On Monday 21st July the east neighbourhood team invited councillors, police, local residents and businesses to a meeting with Kieran Yates, the transport planning officer for Norwich City Council. The meeting was called specifically in response to concerns about speeding and high traffic density along Duke Street. This coincided with a recent car crash into The Golden Star pub.

Thirty local people attended and talked through their complaints and frustrations about the above issues. Kieran then gave each of the attendees a copy of a questionnaire that he had produced, which identified some of the options that might be possible to help to eliminate the issues and asked them for their suggestions. A discussion regarding these options followed.

Kieran made it clear there were many similar problems around the city involving traffic and that his experienced team of planners had only a limited budget. This meant that although the public's views will be influential, the final decision might have to take in a range of considerations that were not immediately obvious and that there may be a delay before they can all be put into place.

Kieran then took away the completed questionnaires and collated the results with other information. He suggested that we meet again when there was some progress to report and the attendees agreed to this.
